STATE INCOME TAX INFORMATION

Questions relating to the state income tax law have been answered by State Comptroller Travis as follows:

215. Owner. I own a house which appreciated $3,000 in value during the year 1919, due to the fact a trolley line was built on an adjoining street. Must I include such increase in value as income?

A. No. You only consider income
where you have disposed of the property by sale, exchange, gift or other disposition.

216. G. Dealer. I own a hardware store in the city of N. Must I report on an inventory book?

A. In all cases where the production, purchase or sale of merchandise of any kind is an income-producing activity should be used.

217. Dealer. I received a note without interest for $500 for commissions which I had earned. Must I include this note as income?

A. You should include the fair discount value of such note, at the time at which you receive this note.
It is such note is subsequently paid, a full year must report the difference between the discounted value and the amount received.

218. Realty. I received land instead of money for the year 1919. The title to this land is in dispute. Should I include the value of this land as income in the year 1919, or at the time the courts decide whether or not my title is valid?

A. You should include the value of the land in the year in which you accepted the land in payment of the debt.

219. Employee. I am employed by a corporation which credits each employee with one share of its stock each year, which is to become available to the employee at the expiration of five years. Should I include as income
the value of the stock credited to me?

A. No. You may never receive this stock as you might leave the employment of the company before your five years of employment have expired.

220. Stockholder. I am a member of a corporation which declared dividends in wine. What should I report as income?

A. The fair market value of this wine should be reported as income.

221. A. B. C. I received a piece of real estate by devise, February 1, 1919, and sold same November 1, 1919. Must I report any part of the proceeds of this sale as income?

A. You should take the fair market value of the property as of the date of the death of the testator and the difference between that value and the selling price indicates whether you have made a gain or loss.

222. Settlor. I own a lot which cost $200, February 1, 1919, which I exchanged for a victrola. How do I determine whether I sustained a gain or loss on this transaction?

A. Take the fair market value of the victrola which you received in exchange for your lot, and the difference between that value and the cost of your lot indicates whether you sustained a gain or loss.

223. Importer. I am engaged in importing goods and merchandise from Europe. May I deduct the import taxes paid on such merchandise?

A. Yes.

224. Broker. (1) Is depreciation allowed on patents and copyrights?
(2) Is depreciation allowed for good will, secret formulas or trade marks?

A. (1) Yes. (2) No.

225. Suburban. I am a farmer and own breeding cattle. Am I entitled to any deduction for depreciation?

A. Yes. You are entitled to charge off for depreciation if you do not report on the inventory basis.
If, however, you report on the inventory basis, you are not entitled to a depreciation deduction.

226. Dry Goods. I own a wholesale dry goods store and employ fifty men who are receiving over $1,900. They have all filed form
101 showing that they are residents.
What should I do with these forms now that the calendar year 1919 has elapsed?

A. These forms should be retained by you until January 1, 1921,
during which time they are subject to examination by an official from the state comptroller's office.

THE TIME TO THINK STRAIGHT

Three Group Control Proposed By Plumb Plan Invites Defeat of Plumb's Plan Forth By Its Advocates.

The Railroad Employee, a railroad labor journal having the largest circulation in America, supported by individual subscription, will contain in its issue of Monday, February 2, the following editorial on the Plumb plan.

The hour is at hand when every railroad employee should come to a decision and declare himself on the issue of the Plumb Plan. The Plumb Plan is not a new thing. It is a nature is ever the same. It is a remedy for an existing condition set forth in glowing terms and advocates while there is an opportunity to silence concerning the Plumb Plan.

The old story of choosing between evolution and revolution. The Plumb Plan is a constructive advance is held in the hands of the evolutionist who reads the pathway and leads the hordes of the revolutionist. The revolutionist dreads the Plumb Plan, the good and the bad, and the revolutionist at the debris, chaos and ruin he has wrought.

Into every system, political, industrial and otherwise, there creep elements that mar broadest usefulness. Correction and not destruction is the answer. The Plumb Plan does not cut down the trees for yield his livelihood, but does use was upon the hurtful insect, cultivation of the good, and extermination of the bad, is the story of civilization's advance and the preservation of every worthwhile system of government and economics.

Common sense would suggest that the railroad employees of the Plumb Plan recognize the proven value of the Plumb Plan of ownership and the damage of the Plumb Plan of operation and ownership of the railroad.

Available statistics show that 47 percent of railroad securities are held by the saving banks of the Plumb Plan. The great life insurance companies, particularly those with policies of industrial policy holders, are heavily invested in the Plumb Plan.

An upset or destruction of the Plumb Plan would prove a calamity to the men and their families. The Plumb Plan has carefully boarded dollars in the savings banks and whose money brings peace of mind because of a profound faith the Plumb Plan will be made in full upon the Plumb Plan.

Now, this the prosperity of the Plumb Plan, more than any other industrial system, depends upon the Plumb Plan and to tear down or impair the ability to operate alone the Plumb Plan.

Government ownership, nationalization and socialistic control, are the Plumb Plan. The Plumb Plan is the Plumb Plan. The Plumb Plan is the Plumb Plan.

Financial Policy.

Money is forthcoming for investments in anything that promises stability. While the investments in short-term treasury bonds are continuing at the rate of nearly 2,000,000,000 francs a month, there is plenty of money for industrial and commercial enterprises and long-term loans. The 4,000,000,000 franc loan to provide immediate resources for indemnifying victims of the invasion was oversubscribed before the official opening of the subscriptions. Important banks and industrial companies have lately increased their capital to an aggregate of nearly 5,000,000,000 francs.

Decentralization of capital and industry is seen in the establishing in Normandy of textile industries to replace those in the occupied territory destroyed by the war. This movement has been greatly extended by development of water power in the region of the Alps and the center and south of France. Industrial leaders say that no particular region of France hereafter will monopolize any industry, and declare that this scattering will prove beneficial and result in a more equitable recovery of all parts of the country.

Instability of the exchange value of the franc is regarded as one of the weakest points in French conditions. It is pointed out that France cannot pay twice over at present high prices for supplies she needs, and that is what the present low value of the franc means. The French government is now studying a complete centralization of the financial policy with a view to making such provisions to meet obligations as will give greatest stability both at home and abroad. Two of the new financial policy are as yet not disclosed, but it is understood that it comprises a large interior loan to take up all short-term bonds and floating debt, and important increases in a taxes to bring the revenues up to the annual budget, estimated to require approximately 20,000,000 francs. It is not expected that any international financial arrangement can exert more than a moral influence on the value of the franc abroad, and this may be said to be the object of the greater activity in official circles.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Howard Rogers, sixteen months old, a survivor of the Southern Pacific wreck at Acton and son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Rogers, who are here from Sacramento, is believed to be the youngest person ever successfully interviewed under such circumstances. Asked if he would tell how the accident happened, the bright little fellow responded immediately with his statement of the sequence of events, telling his story in just five words. Here is what Howard said happened and the way it occurred:

Chelsea, Mass.—Residents in the vicinity of Chelsea have been disturbed nights by an active but elusive screech owl. The little raptor starts in his residence between 9 and 10 o'clock. The police have been asked to capture the bird. During the day the owl flies from one chimney to another in an effort to escape capture. The police have given an alibi that it is against the game laws to shoot the owl.

German newspapers say 61,000 more students enrolled in the universities of Germany than in 1934. In the year of the beginning of the war there were 1,000 students enrolled, while in 1934 there are approximately 51,000. The requirement is increase of nearly 2000 each for each of the 25 different universities. In 11 technical schools more than 10,000 new students are compared to 10,000 in 1934.

"It is probable that a good deal of the wood alcohol that is being distributed as a beverage is the result of the attempts of amateurs to make ordinary alcohol. In their ignorance they use vegetable substances such as potato peelings and, by using too intense fire and making the distillation without having first allowed fermentation to take place, produce methyl or wood alcohol instead," said J. ## THE PHELPS ROAD TO HAPPINESS

Possible Though Money, Health and Other Good Things be Lost, Yale Professor Told Clubwomen—Interesting Thoughts the Basis.

If there were those who, accepting the invitation of the Monday and Athlathion Clubs to hear William Lyons Phelps lecture on "Culture and Happiness" at the chapel of the First Reformed Church Friday evening, anticipated hearing an abstract, mystical, "high-brow" lecture, they must have been greatly disappointed. It was such a whole some, such a cleverly presented case in favor of happiness, possibly for all, that the cultural phase left to inference, that the great pity was that only the chosen few instead of the entire community were privileged to hear what Mr. Phelps, professor of Yale University, had to say.

At it was the Athlathion Club that took the initiative in bringing Mr. Phelps to Kingston, Miss Mary E. Noyce, president of the Athlathion Club, welcomed the guests of the Monday and Athlathion Clubs and introduced the speaker whose books were read with such pleasure by all and moreover whose writings on the great books of his predecessors make our reading of those authors a new experience.

Mr. Phelps said that no matter what else they might forget of what he had to say on this subject, he hoped his hearers would never forget the definition of the happiest person in the world, given by the late Timothy Dwight. "The person who thinks the most interesting thoughts." The speaker considered this definition perfect, because the principle was right, happiness must be within. Right here it should be stated that Mr. Phelps's illustrations were all pitilessly true to life, and portrayed with that touch of the finest humor that has underpinned its cleverness a foundation in fact that is serious truth.

He believed that happiness should be a part of ones character and not something which one carries around with one and which another may take away. He showed vividly how one may lose money, health, position, friends and yet not lose their happiness if their source is secure within one, and growing. The speaker proved that money, health, physical comfort, all good in themselves, are still not the most important things in life, if it be true that "he is happiest who has the most interesting thoughts."

And then the speaker made a most unusual assertion, that we grow happier as we grow older. He defined as plain "Be," the statement that youth is the happiest time of life, for were such the case, we would reach the climax of living between the ages of 18 and 22 and all the long years after would but mark a slow diminution. He accused all of being afraid to admit that they were better as good times as they were, and furthermore of fearing advancing years. His description of gray hair as being the gray matter of the brain, coming out and discovering the hair beneath forth a great laugh. To those who scoffed that of one's own older they lost their illusions, the speaker said of course one did but in place of illusions one got new ideas, and an idea was always more fun than an illusion. Again it was claimed that as we grow older we lose our enthusiasm. This, too, Mr. Phelps denied, showing that instead we transferred our enthusiasm from what first attracted us to the different phases of living as we go along.

As for growing old "gracefully," that the lecturer said couldn't be done. Grace belongs momentaneously and unduly to youth which is always decorative, but not to advance the years.

He decidedly exploded the tradition that childhood was the happiest time of all, when we are full when leaving school and we are so used, it seems, to be full. "Yes," said the speaker, "and that was not the worst of it, we were full to bed when we were not asleep. In other words the child is at the mercy, physically and mentally of those older than him." self, while with advancing years he gains his liberty both physically and mentally.

Mr. Phelps gave a most amusing illustration of why he thought the American cow to be ideally happy as far as physical comfort and mental freedom from anxiety was concerned. But after his audience had laughed heartily at his reasoning, they all knew he was right when he said, that in spite of all he had said, not one of his hearers wanted to be a cow, proving that physical comfort and lack of worry and responsibility does not make happiness. It was still the thinking the most interesting thoughts.

From this point in the lecture, the "culture," part came in, though not so much as mentioned by the speaker. He spoke of music, and said that if there were any in the audience who felt they were not musical, he wanted to say that if they had normal hearing they could become passionate, devoted, discerning lovers of music. All that was needed was normal ears. His description of his first symphony concert, where Theodore Thomas's orchestra played Beethoven and Wagner program, while highly entertaining and amusing must have struck a responsive chord in the heart of many a hearer. Only because it honestly was distressing to him, while to others it was honestly unspeakable joy, which they got from what he failed to appreciate, he went again and again, until finally he could honestly say that now he knew of no greater joy than to listen to a great symphonic program played by a symphonic orchestra. He knew the truth, that music is the only universal language, and while unable to play a single instrument, among his "interesting thoughts" were those of many a musical masterpiece of symphonic composition.

Then there is pictorial art. Mr. Phelps took more stock in a cheap photograph of a great masterpiece, than in the most costly painting that was no good. Lastly Mr. Phelps dealt upon the subject of books as helping to give one the interesting thoughts that make for happiness. He believed that what we want we get, so if we want to be careful, what our wants are, it might be quite the right thing to want money, for with it untold good could be done. He advised his hearers to remember that it was not the professors, but the business men that made the colleges possible; it was not the physicians and surgeons but the business men that made our hospitals possible; it was not the clergymen but the business men that make our churches possible.

Personally he had always wanted books. He not only had them now, a roomful all his own, but they kept coming to him. And he divided books into classes; those relating to facts and those relating to fiction. Under the heading of facts, came books on mathematics and science. They were full of interest to those who find beauty about precision, but they admit of no argument. Fiction allows of preference where there is no umpire. Then the speaker reminded his hearers that we are living in the most miraculous age of the world to date. The story of the sleeping princess seems tame compared with the thought of a president of the United States, touching a button at Washington—like the contact of the prince's kiss that awakened the princess—when instantly, hundreds of miles away, rocks which had slumbered for millions of years awoke and opened up a highway across a continent.

Mr. Phelps then proved the truth of fiction and the falsity of science, by mentioning two contemporaneous books, David Copperfield and The Origin of Species. Today David Copperfield needs no revision to be real and true to life, but the Origin of Species would need considerable revision to be true to the scientific knowledge of our day. Fiction is founded on human nature, and human nature does not change, we but gain a better control of it.

In closing Mr. Phelps said he believed that today the great danger of the world was fear of life, and yet it is the most marvelous thing in the world to be able to have our senses and thoughts. It was indeed a marvelous thing, how our young men went overseas during the war, and returned what they did with the fear of death. Then why should we fear life? "Sleep up and take cover."

After the lecture a social hour was enjoyed, many of the guests met Mr. Phelps and during the time, sundries and coffee were served.

Famous Woman Astronomer.

Caroline Herschel stands out as if in protest against the theory that woman's grey matter is inferior to that of man. She was the daughter of Isaac Herschel, a musician of Hannover, Germany. Her brother William came to England to seek his fortune. Caroline followed him to Bath in 1758. In time William turned his attention to astronomy. Gaining the favor of George III, he became the greatest astronomer of the age. For forty years he pursued his investigation of the heavens at Windsor, his sister Caroline his chief assistant. She discovered seven comets by means of a telescope which her brother prepared for her use. In 1788 she published a "Catalogue of the Stars," subsequently a "Catalogue of Nebulae and Star Clusters." In 1828 the Astronomical Society's gold medal was given to her. She died at the age of ninety-seven years.—Chicago Journal.

Sustenance in the Mesquit.

The mesquit yields excellent food for both man and beast. The authority says that the bean, of which husk and all are used, contains over 30 per cent of practicable food elements. The Indians nowadays do not call on it to the extent they did formerly. When the mesquit ground from the leaves of this plant was the staple of their diet, though they still use it freely; but horses, and the countless burros and the desert cattle rejoice at sight of a bean-hung mesquit. Many times, during expeditions that took us far out of range of ordinary food, the situation has been saved for our animals by our finding a mesquit of two, the twigs, peeling with plump clusters and the ground nibbled with the fallen fruit. ## What Aunt Mary Says

Sugar and eggs, salt and flour,
Baking powder to give them power,
SALANUT pure to mix them right,—
We'll have real doughnuts tomorrow night.

A potato creamed will add to the flavor,
And altogether the mixture will savor
Of dainty deliciousness, tickling the taste,
And when fried, not a crumb of the doughnut will waste.
Fry them in SALANUT; when they are brown,
You'll smile with the rest of them, never a frown.

Over them all sprinkle sugar so sweet,
Give the whole family an old-fashioned treat.

Aunt Mary's Directions:

1 cup SALANUT
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 quart flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 eggs
1 cup creamed potatoes
3 teaspoons baking powder

Cream the sugar and SALANUT, add the potato, then add the eggs, one at a time, adding the flour sifted with baking powder. Mix to a stiff dough. Roll out in additional flour and fry in boiling SALANUT.

Your grocer will supply you with SALANUT.
